"Nesting Habits"

by
Ariel Freeman & Elise King-Lynch

'Nesting Habits' is a series of paintings Ariel began in early 2020, when home became a place of refuge, safety, and peace from the unknown of the pandemic and social unrest. The paintings created over the year summate a personal journey, finding a place of comfort and support, soothing the turmoil created by financial and family uncertainty, and the realization as a parent, that children grow and move on.

Elise is more interested in the denizens of the nest, the eggs. Elise's last show was called 'Eggstremes' which focused on intricate patterns and precision. "Today I am still drawn to precise lines in my work, but I am also experimenting with more natural designs," says Elise.
